

At our school, we have a fundraiser called Jump Rope for Heart. Every kid can raise money to help people with bad hearts and they get a quacky duck in return. A quacky duck is a necklace with a duck that hangs on the bottom of it. I got it mine this week. I donated my own five dollars to help others and to get a quacky duck. Luckily, I still have lots of money left in my bank.

In the middle of the day, our secretary brought mine down. I remember how excited I felt that I had one. I wore it the rest of the day. When recess came, I went to the swings and watched the other people play. Then, I had an idea. I will wear it every day so that people know that I helped other who have bad hearts. When I came home, my Mom and Dad were surprised that I got my quacky duck but they were happy that I helped others. When it was time for bed, I put my quacky duck on my comic desk and went to sleep. I'm glad I got my quacky duck!
